Application Discovery Telecash Network

2008-06-10

1 Introduction

This is the report from the Telecash network part in Bad Vilbel. It shows the overall traffic bandwidth for the first 25 protocols with the most traffic. It is split in six hour intervals, showing a bandwidth graph followed by the tabular listing of the protocols. For each protocol in each interval follows the listing of the top sessions with their respective transmitted amount of data. Host names are resolved by the local Telecash domain name server. If it did not include an entry for a certain IP, name resolution isn't possible and "Host Unknown" is printed.

The total amount (or all) of the running applications in the discovered network can't be determined completely. This is due to the short time taken to do the discovery. Furthermore it is only feasible to do the report for the top talkers and top sessions. With this amount of data transferred in the network, small exchanges of data is hard to spot and even harder to put into a "static" report like a PDF or Word document

Currently we only discovered and probed the Telecash network, which only includes small amounts of data (if at all) for traffic between BU's or traffic to the Internet.

The communication matrices are really big, the discovered networks are complicated and the tools used for discovery quite powerful. For a better overview and to save time, we condensed the report to the top talkers and important sessions, as it gives a good overview over the amount of traffic that flows through the network. We are proposing however, to adjust the expectations of First Data with the results of this report, to use this as basis for the future discoveries in the business units. To view all communications, we recommend that the appliance should be used in collaboration with the client. There are however communication matrices for the top sessions for each protocol, so most of the traffic going through the network can be seen in this matrices.

Identification of mission critical applications and dependencies in case of systems moving to Germany can only be done in collaboration with FDI employees. Because of the complex nature of big sites like this, the understanding of the inner workings takes quite a big time and to get to a result quickly, collaboration is vital.

To get the latencies from the WAN lines (especially from the foreign contries to Germany), special measurements have to be done and cannot be gauged by using NetFlow and probes. For this the usage of netperf or similar tools is recommended, which requires a client on both ends of the line to be measured.

Another part of this report are HTML files for each individual recorded session and their respective bandwidths. The form of HTML files has been chosen, so the usability is better than a static document.

2 Notes to some protocols

2.1 File Transfers

File transfers seem to be done mainly via SSH and FTP, as there can be seen some connections with other Telecash subsidiaries (especially in the night times) and clients. In house file transfers are either done with the above or using Microsoft protocols like NETBIOS-SSN and Microsoft-DS. These are the normal protocols for the so called "Windows Network" for sharing and transferring files.

2.1.1 Windows Network

The majority of data transferred in the Telecash network consists of Windows file sharing data. Over a 24h period, more than 500 gigabyte of traffic has been exchanged, which is more than 46% of the overall traffic. The bandwidth graph for this protocol shows an average of a bit over 50 Mbit/s for the day, with peaks going up to 465 Mbit/s. These can be seen in the time between 06:00 o'clock in the morning to 14:00 o'clock.
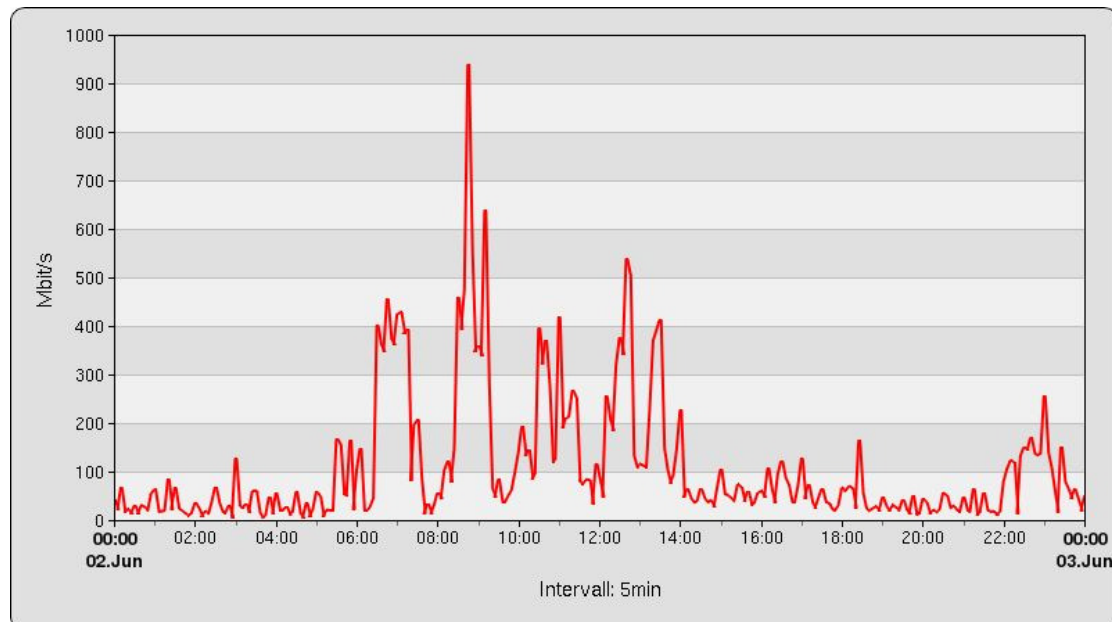

A lot of hosts are doing minor exchanges via the Windows network. Bigger transfers seem to include amongst others:

- 10.128.2.167
- 10.128.2.168
- 10.128.2.15

T-Systems Business Services GmbH, Author Florian Doerfler, 2008-06-10

- 10.128.2.16
- 10.128.2.22

Some of the hosts seem to be file servers with software, SAP system and database servers. To further identify the exact hosts, a collaboration with FDD, respectively Telecash employees, is vital.

2.1.2 FTP

Most traffic via FTP should be negligible, since it has a very low bandwidth. The only traffic with a short bandwidth burst up to 120 Mbit/s occurred around 9:00 o'clock between 62.153.144.106 and 10.128.2.231.
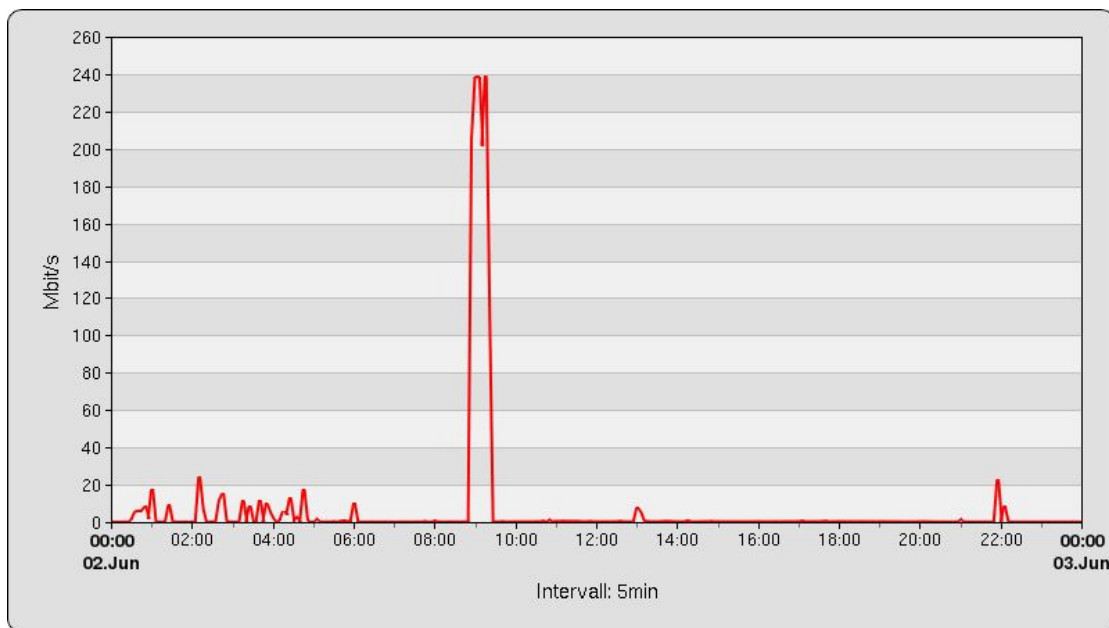

2.1.3 SSH

It seems that some file transfers are done using SSH. Or SSH is used to tunnel other file transfer protocols (e.g. FTP).
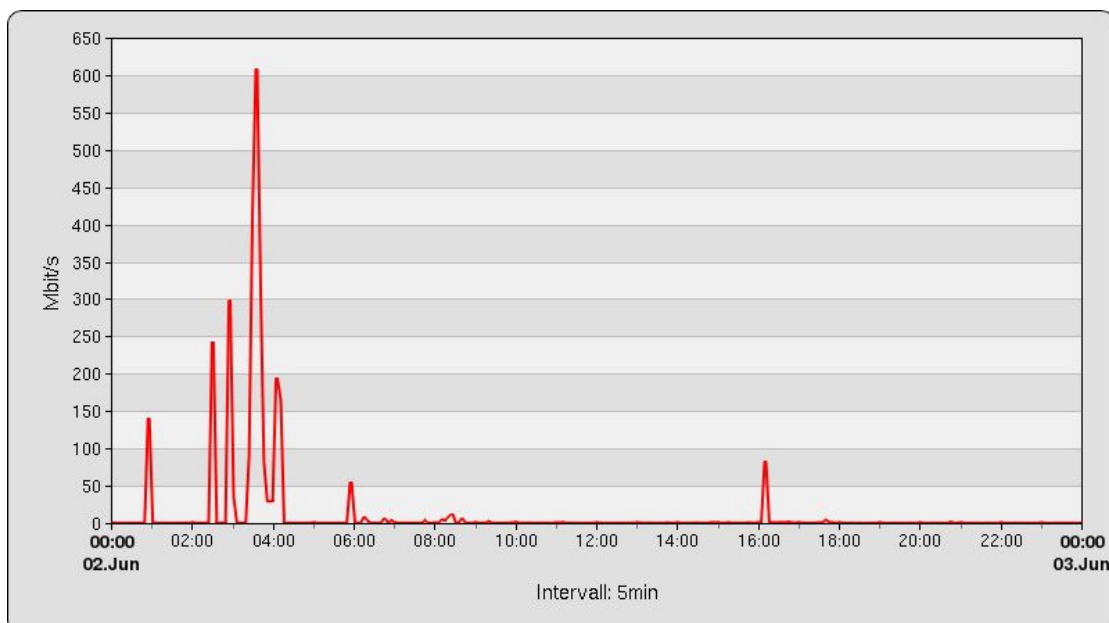

Over a 24 hour period the average throughput is around 5 Mbit/s, with peaks up to 305 Mbit/s. The majority of the traffic is being generated by the sessions:

- 172.28.1.150 to 10.128.222.252

- 62.153.144.108 to 10.128.222.100

- 172.28.1.50 to 10.128.222.100

The IP address 62.153.144.108 seems to be a Telecash subsidiary.

2.2 SAP

The normal traffic has an average over the whole day of about 8 Mbit/s, with a visible peak aroung 8:00 o'clock (up to 262 Mbit/s). This connection is between 10.128.2.210 and 10.128.2.56, although the latter one being a backup server. Somehow this backup runs over the TCP ports 3200-3500, which should be the ports for SAP.
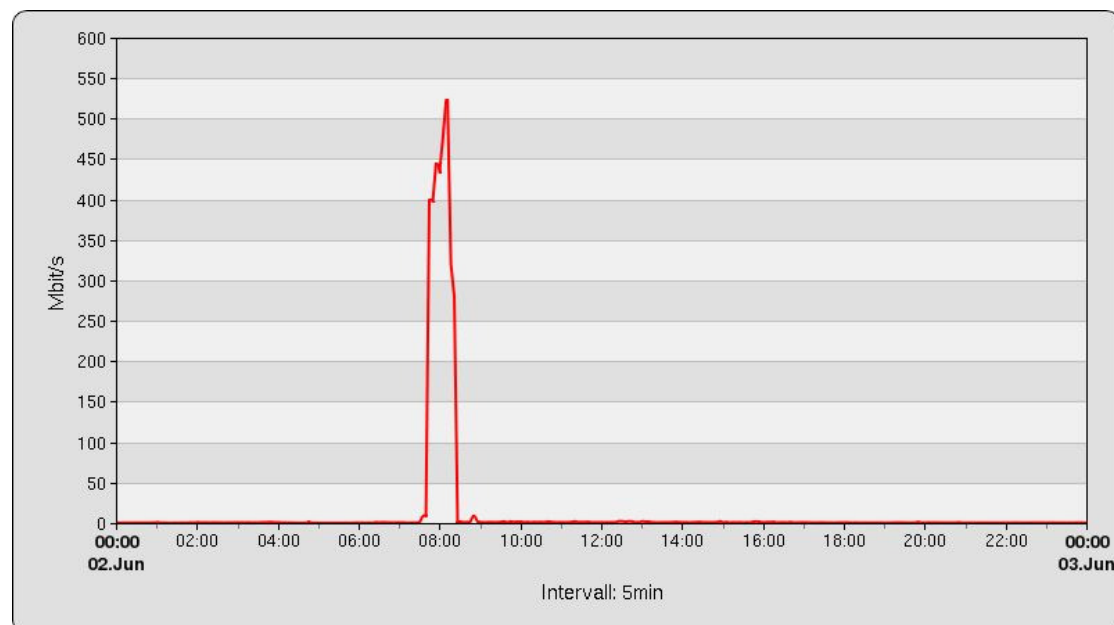

2.3 Microsoft Exchange

Average Exchange traffic throughput is about 3 Mbit/s with peaks up to 31 Mbit/s. The spike around 04:00 o'clock is an exchange between 10.128.2.31 and 10.128.2.8, both being Exchange servers possibly doing a synchronization.
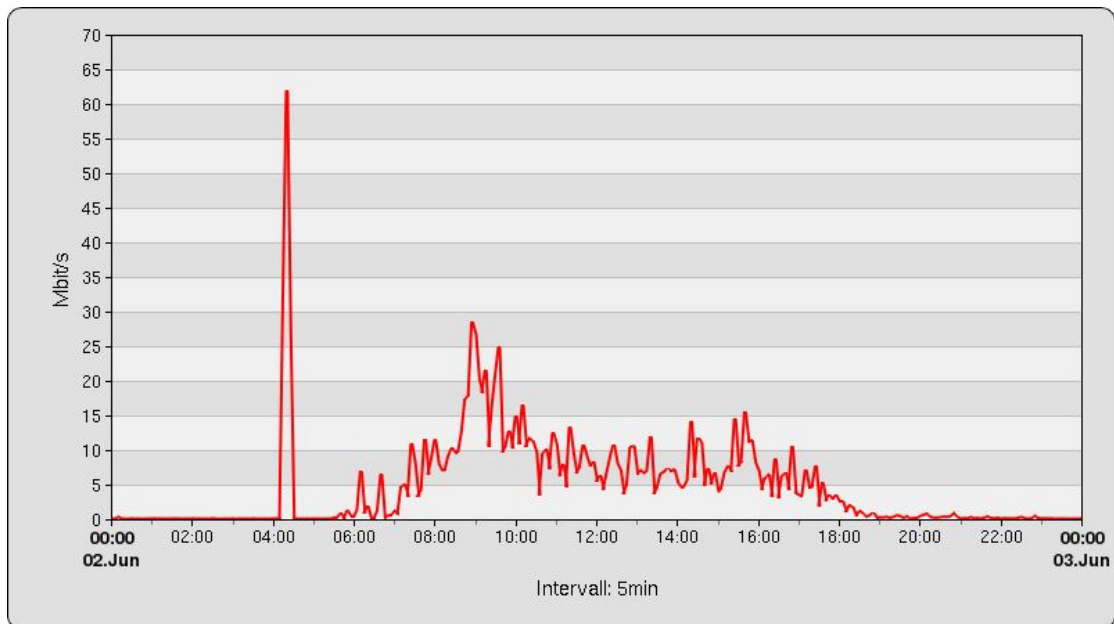

2.4 HTTP

All traffic goes through the proxy server 10.128.2.24, with the following bandwidth utilization over the day (average about 4.2 Mbit/s, peaks up to 20 Mbit/s)
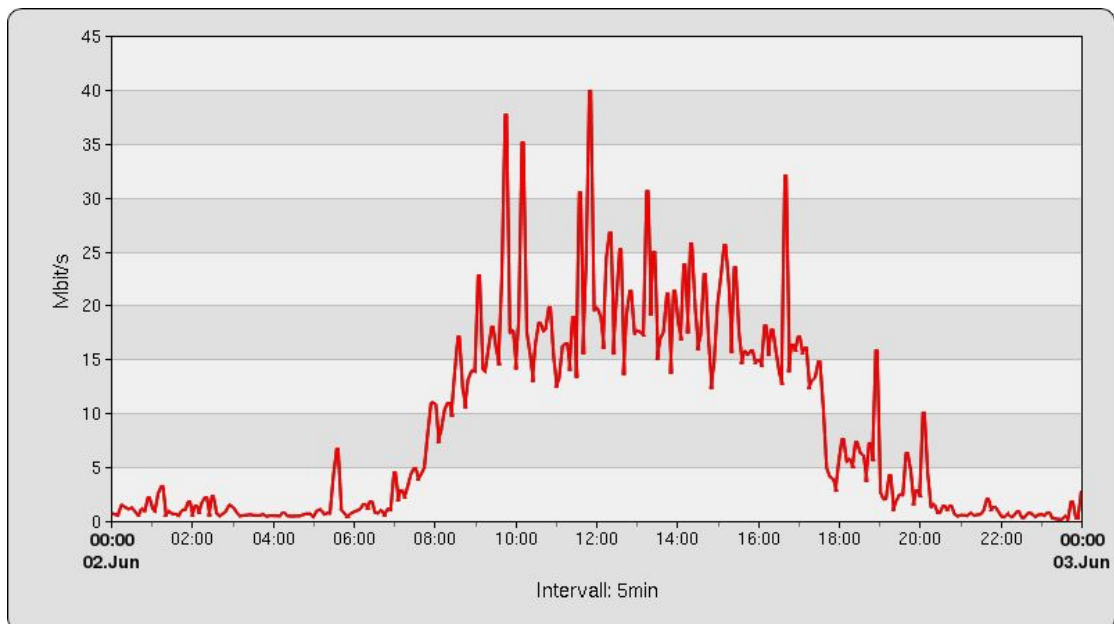

2.5 BrightStor Backup

Backup servers seem to be 10.128.2.44 and 10.128.2.56, as most of the traffic goes to them. Overall average is 12 Mbit/s with peaks of 296 Mbit/s.
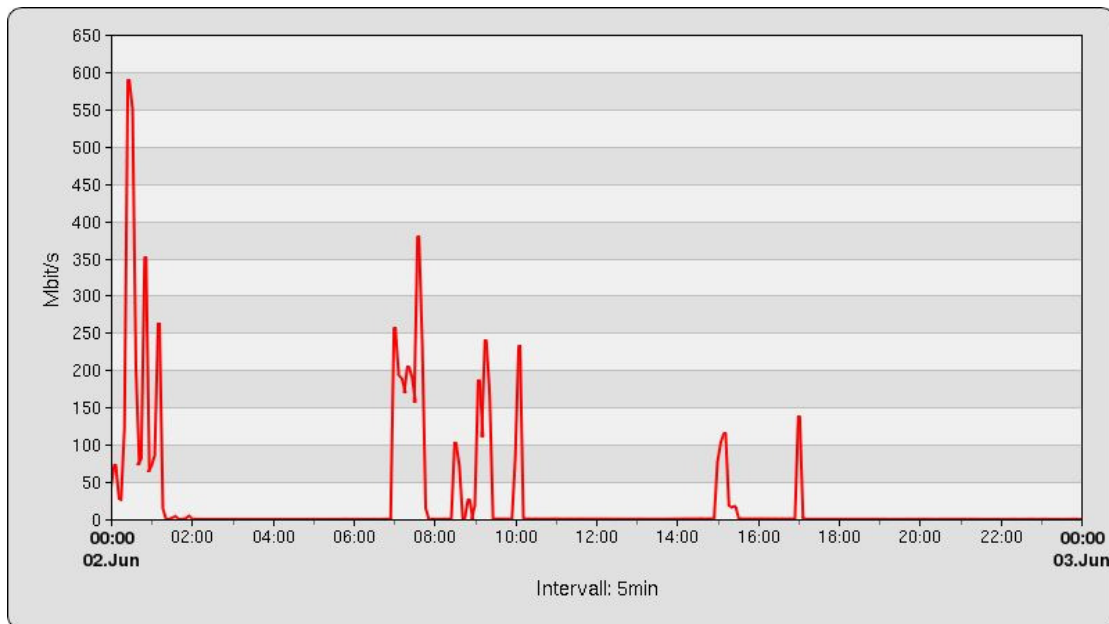

2.6 X11

There is a lot of XDMCP traffic, the transfer protocol to send X-Windows sessions over the network to a distant X-Server. It seems that this is mainly used for displaying OpenView Operations or Network Node Manager on the operator consoles.

If the operating resides not in the actual data centres and this traffic is routed over a WAN line, special considerations have to be made about the available bandwidth for XDMCP traffic. Higher latencies and low bandwidth are lowering the usability, as the GUI gets unresponsive and takes quite some time to load. Especially for the operating this is bad, as it has to react quickly in times of crisis. It has to be considered to use special software, to speed up the XDMCP traffic. NX from NoMachine provides such solutions as commercial or free versions.

2.7 DB Sync

Currently there is a migration of database servers running. For this migration, data is being synced between the old and the new database, which results in quite big amounts of transferred data and big bandwidth usage.

2.8 IDEAFARM-CATCH (Port 903)

The name comes from the IANA port list and is a legacy name, as it seems that this port is nowadays used by VMWare as a console port.

3 Dependencies after Relocation

To get a detailed report of dependencies after relocating servers, so not to over utilize the WAN lines, requires more time onsite as well as more time for analysis. This is a longer process in collaboration with employees from the client, who know the network and applications. The top sessions for each protocol do give some clue however, which of the systems have extensive data exchange.

Most of the WAN traffic can possibly be avoided, by choosing the correct location for each server and implementing specific high availability and mission critical setups. For example, the traffic to the BrightStor backup system should stay inside one location and not be routed over WAN lines. This sounds obvious, as it not only speeds up the backup process, but more importantly in the disaster recovery case, the restore is faster as well. If backup data should reside on more than one location for disaster recovery reasons, other mechanisms for mirroring the data (e.g. asynchronous data mirroring between SANs) between the locations, and backing up this data can be implemented.

Also, most of the traffic is normally not highly prioritized, meaning that it doesn't matter if the transfer takes 1 minute, or 10 minutes. Only a minority of the traffic needs to get higher priorities (e.g. clearing data sent to banks before a certain deadline or core traffic, which has to be delivered with a low latency). To identifiy this traffic, the network discovery is not sufficient to find out to which traffic a certain session belongs, as it depends on the payload transported (one needs to know what exactly is being transported to decide the importance of the transfer), which is not visible when doing the discovery. For this, employees of the client need to check their internal process documentations to find the relevant traffic and cross check with the findings of the discovery.

The hosts which need special consideration in any case are the top talkers as listed in the following table. A lot of traffic is generated by the backup, as can be seen that the backup servers are on position one and three.

4 WAAS

Wide Area Application Services from Cisco is able to speed up certain protocols by using sophisticated caching and compression algorithms. If WAAS should be deployed depends largely on the type of setup used to provide the BU's with day-to-day services. If the office applications are provided via Terminal Server or Citrix, WAAS may not be the right choice. If the file servers are located in Germany, the amount of traffic currently discovered in the Telecash network suggests the implementation of WAAS, as it speeds up the Windows Network file transfers (this at least is a must, as Windows Network traffic over slower connections with higher latencies tends to get quite slow).

For other services, like Microsoft Exchange groupware, the final results from the other BU's needs to be considered and tests with the actual lines between the BU and the data centres in Germany have to be done to get a statement about demand to use WAAS.
